Joyang Textile

A retro destination that people of all ages love

This modern gallery café is a renovated textile factory from the 1930s which, until recently, had been neglected for decades. The 4960 m² space of the old factory has now been reborn as a place for exhibiting old items and housing a large café. Today, it combines the beauty of hanok and the architectural style of a Japanese house. Under a high ceiling that envelops traces of many years gone by, visitors sit at tables that were made using these factory machines decades ago, making the experience feel like you are traveling back in time over coffee.

Ppeoldabang

A Latin American landscape in Incheon

This roastery cafe is equipped with a studio, woodworking workshop, and gallery. The word dabang is an old Korean term that used to refer to tearooms. Although this might lead one to believe that a dabang would only sell traditional Korean teas, Ppeoldabang has gained a reputation for its unique atmosphere, which is reminiscent of a Cuban beach, and its refreshing lime-flavored mojitos, a very popular item on the menu. Located on Dangneomeo Beach on Seonjaedo Island, which is connected to Daebudo Island via Seonjaedaegyo Bridge, visitors can relax and take a quiet walk here, as it's a completely private beach. At low tide, you can even walk all the way to Mokseom Island, which you can see right in front of you from Ppeoldabang.

Ahopsan Forest

A forest that one family has lovingly watched over for nine generations

This forest, which the Moon family from Nampyeong has fondly attended to for nine consecutive generations, means “mountain with nine valleys.” The public only gained access to this area in 2015 after it was designated a “beautiful forest to be preserved for the 22nd century” by a Korean initiative to protect forests in 2004. Ahopsan Forest contains 116 Geumgang pine trees, all of which are revered and have been designated as protected trees by the Korean government. Its 33000 m2 bamboo forest is also the largest area for a single tree species in Korea, attracting attention as a filming location for television shows and movies on a consistent basis.

From Dudo Observatory you can see not only Dudo Island, but also Haeundae and Songjeong, both of which are popular tourist attractions in Busan, as well as Japan's Tsushima Island in the distance. Connected to Amnam Park's healing forest trail, which is well-known as a great place for walking in Busan, this is a popular destination for lovers, friends, and families.

A well-known BTS shrine for the ARMY Tour

In May 2022, a panoramic 60 m mural went up on the wall of Daesung Elementary School in Daegu. This is what BTS's Chinese fan club set up at V's alma mater to celebrate his birthday. Wooreuk Instrument Academy

A cradle of traditional music sounds and style

Enjoy not only listening to the soothing sounds of the gayageum (zither), a traditional Korean musical instrument that goes back 1,500 years, but also experience making one yourself. The fact that this academy is located in Goryeong is even more meaningful because Wooreuk, a court musician in the 6th century, first created a gayageum in this region. A gayageum is a musical instrument that requires very careful attention to detail in its production. It is made with paulownia trees that have been naturally dried for five to seven years. Also, it can make a clear sound only after it has been touched by a human hand 1,000 times. Kim Donghwan, a master of the instrument, has continued his work into a wide array of research and activities for the past 35 years to ensure that the reputation of Goryeong's gayageum goes on. The Wooreuk Instrument Academy is the birthplace of such efforts, and you can still feel his passion and philosophy for gayageum to this day.

Nongamjongtaek

A family's devotion to maintain a tradition stretching back 650 years

Nongamjongtaek is one of the most recognized family head houses in Andong, a small urban center listed as part of the UNESCO World Heritage Cities Programme. That is because the family has inherited and carried on their history and traditions for over 650 years (17 generations). The accommodation here allows you to feel the spirit of old Confucian scholars who focused diligently on their studies. At the same time, you can also try some very special liquor called Illyeoppyeonju, which is only made by this family. Lee Wonjeong, the wife of the family's 17th-generation first son, makes the liquor using traditional malt, producing an alcoholic beverage that is amazing both in its production technique and taste.

Byeongsanseowon Confucian Academy

A noteworthy example of Korean architecture melded beautifully with nature

Seowon were private educational institutions built by local intellectuals in 17th-century Joseon. Byeongsanseowon Confucian Academy was one such school. Famous for producing many talents over the years, the secret to the academy's success seems to be the more than 3,000 documents in its collection. Not only is it located where the Nakdonggang River flows by so majestically but it also features natural scenery that is simply outstanding. On top of that, it is considered by many to be one of the most important examples of Korean architecture from that time period due to its breathtaking harmony with the surrounding scenery. In particular, the view from Mandaeru Pavilion, where proverbial landscape paintings open themselves up like a folding screen between seven pillars, is as beautiful as an oriental painting. In 2019, it was listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site in Korea.

Museum Village

A village highlighting the wisdom of Koreans' ancestors

Residents have lived in this traditional village since the mid-17th century, and the historic old houses and living spaces have been well preserved to this day. Just as the meaning of the village's name implies—"an island floating alone on the water"—the Naeseongcheon Stream flows around the three sides of the village, so it's said that residents have long gathered their wisdom and crossed the water path by using a single log bridge that did not restrict the flow of water. Accommodation in traditional hanok is available, while the Museum Cultural Village offers various traditional cultural programs to visitors, such as making ceramics, dyeing, and drawing the four plants referred to as sagunja, or the Four Gentlemen (plum blossom, orchid, bamboo, chrysanthemum).

Yoseokgung 1779

A generational look at one distinguished family's dignified Korean cuisine

Yoseokgung 1779 is a high-end Korean table d'hôte restaurant run on the enviable skills of the Gyeongju Choi family, which has been serving guests for three centuries. The restaurant has changed the way it serves meals, from the traditional method of sharing dishes with several people to a style of using one table per person, highlighting the historical meaning and unique taste of the ingredients for each dish in the process. Seasonal menu items with a traditional liquor called Te monje, which used to be made by the family, and yukjang (red pepper paste and meat)—a secret Choi family recipe—are extremely popular. The Korean-style garden, which is nicely designed with pine trees and a bamboo forest, adds to the taste of food.

Ssukbujaengi

A healthy, eco-friendly approach to vegetarian cuisine in Korea

This vegetarian restaurant known solely for its out-of-this-world food earned its reputation without very much promotion at all. The prix fixe Korean meal consists of vegetarian dishes such as fresh seasoned vegetables, gujeolpan (a platter of nine delicacies) made of colorful vegetables, and bean steak, which is served with lotus leaf rice containing jujubes and ginkgo nuts. The enzyme fermentation sauce and seasonal ingredients make all the food taste light and digestible. The view of the rice field outside the windows right next to the restaurant helps make the dining experience even more memorable.

Experience a Templestay at Jikjisa Temple

A temple visit to bring the mind and body into equilibrium

This meditation program is run at the 1000-year-old Sikjisa Temple. Visitors can reinvigorate their mind and spirit in the clear mountain air of the temple while reaching a state of being as bright as the smile of Buddha. In 2002, it officially hosted a templestay program by inviting foreign ambassadors to Korea, and has since become the country's leading temple for templestay programs. Along with basic programs, including traditional Buddhist culture experiences such as Buddhist services, meditation, bowing 108 times (to free oneself from the 108 defilements), and making a Buddhist rosary with 108 beads, you can choose between a relaxation type of program ("A little comma in your mind") and an experiential program ("Looking directly into your mind").

Daecheongho Obaengni (500-ri) Road

A walking path for the health and reinvigoration of urbanites

This area includes walking trails formed along the waterway of Daecheongho Lake, often referred to as the "Inland Sea of Korea." Daecheongho Lake was formed upon the completion of the Daecheong Dam in 1980, embracing part of a large city nearby in the process. High mountains and hills became islands as water flooded in, and the 80-kilometer-long circumference of the magnificent lake was reborn as trails and shelter for local residents. Of the 21 trails in total, section 4, called Hoban Nangman-gil (Lakeside Romantic Road), and sections 2, 3, 4 & 5, all of which lead to a road lined with cherry blossom trees in spring, are most popular.

Danyanggang Jando Trail

An appreciation for sculptures formed over time by nature

Danyanggang Jando Trail is a 1.2 km trekking path which took shape as if a shelf had been mounted along the rock face of the Namhangang River. Along the Namhangang River, the Danyanggang River section was traditionally difficult to access in the past due to its sheer cliffs, but with the installation of a cliffside path it became possible to closely examine the hidden scenic beauty of Danyang. Natural sculptures formed out of limestone terrain unfold vividly in front of your eyes all around the Danyanggang River, which was designated as the first national geopark in Korea's Chungcheong provinces.

Sanghwawon

A garden brimming with Korean traditions and natural beauty

Sanghwawon is a Korean-style traditional garden and accommodation built on Jukdo Island and so named because of the many bamboo trees that are native to the area. It took 20 years to build the 2 km long roof corridor surrounding the entire island and restore nine hanok structures. The hanok and their adjacent traditional gardens were arranged in harmony with the surrounding terrain. Today, there's a beach reading room, a beach pond, and a sculpture garden to relax in and around. Accommodation facilities include a traditional hanok village and 20 villas, providing an opportunity to enjoy fantastic sunsets on the island, which is surrounded by bamboo forests and black pine trees, as well as a marvelous view of the sea.

A journey of light to rescue the queen

The 1.3 km path, from the entrance of Gangcheonsan Mountain to Cheonwoo Falls, has excellent natural scenery, as well as colorful lights and media images that embroider the night forest trail. Maisan Tapsa Temple

A mysterious view of numerous stone pagodas

The central part that further enhances the reputation of this area, which is called Maisan Mountain ("Horse Ear Mountain" in Korean) because the shape of its two peaks carved by nature resembles the ears of horses, contains about 80 stone pagodas of different sizes and heights, all of which have been densely standing in the valley to guard the mountain's entrance for more than 100 years. The stone pagodas were built by a Taoist priest who collected stones and piled them up every night for 30 years, from 1885 on. Incredibly, they never collapsed or shook after they were erected despite the many strong typhoons that swept through the area over the years. The secret of how they were built has never been discovered, piquing the curiosity of all those who visit.

Baekundong Garden

A garden and accompanying landscape highly praised by Joseon scholars

Baekundong Garden is a rural villa garden where the original form of a traditional Korean garden is preserved in its original form. The longer you stay here, the more you'll admire the garden. A rural villa garden refers to a residential space that scholars in the mid-Joseon Dynasty tended to while away from their home and relaxing in nature. During the Joseon Dynasty, many scholars praised the scenery in this area and left countless poems and paintings for posterity. You'll feel a sense of awe for nature due to the impressive organization of the garden, such as the arrangement of spaces that allows water from Wolchulsan Mountain valley to pass through the garden pond and then flow outward, as well as the location of the pavilion outside the garden walls.

Forest Arboretum

A bounty of beautiful hydrangeas

More than 1,600 species of plants grow in the dense natural forest against the backdrop of Duryunsan Mountain, Haenam. The garden was created by bringing together the Gusugol Valley and cypress forests in Bongdong, a naturally formed recreation area, and minimizing any damage to nature. Beautiful flowers, such as hydrangeas, ground pinks, and pink muhly grass, color the forest trail beautifully every season to welcome visitors. Held every summer, the End of the Land Haenam Hydrangea Festival displays a wide variety of colorful hydrangeas that are rarely seen in other regions of Korea, attracting tourists from all over the country.

Yusunkwan

Korea's first inn

Opened in 1914, Yusunkwan was Korea's first inn. It was used as a guest house for monks and religious followers visiting nearby Daeheungsa Temple, and began active operations as an inn business in the 1970s. After some recent remodeling, it has been transformed into a neat and tidy hanok hotel where 100 years of history and modern facilities coexist. Each of the six pristine hotel rooms is divided into a bedroom space and a space to take your tea. The composition of the facility as a whole harmonizes the surroundings with nature, such as a small yet immaculate courtyard and a yard facing a valley. Many guests especially like the outdoor garden, as you have an excellent view through the window from a private spa.

DMZ Museum

A place that reminds us all of the pain of war and the importance of peace

This Korean museum, unlike anything else in the world, deals solely with matters related to the DMZ. Located in a restricted area for civilians, you can visit the museum only after submitting an application for entrance, watching a security education video, and receiving a vehicle pass at the museum checkpoint. Under the theme of everything DMZ, numerous permanent, special, and outdoor exhibitions are held here, all of which attempt to capture the horrors of the Korean War and the process of how the Demilitarized Zone was originally created.

Bauzium Sculpture Museum

A space where the beauty of nature, architecture and art are all unified

"Bauzium" is a combination of two words in a Gangwon-do dialect meaning "rock" and "museum." Designed by architect Kim In-cheol, this museum captures the undeniable tranquility between nature, architecture, and sculpture through the many layers of stone walls surrounding the area. The space containing sculptures retains a charm all its own, as is evidenced by the water garden, stone garden, and pine garden. At the same time, the cafe outside the sculpture hall is as balanced with nature as the exhibition venue itself.

Chogok Yonggul Chotdaebawigil Trail

A breathtaking slice of nature and the legend of the heavenly bound dragon

A 512 m eco-friendly deck path, a 56 m suspension bridge, and a sea observatory all complement each other perfectly alongside the blue waters of the East Sea and the conspicuously rocky terrain on this beach path. In Korean, yonggul means "the cave where a dragon ascended to heaven." There's a legend that a fisherman conducted a memorial ritual for a dead snake in a nearby sea cave. The snake was then brought back to life, transformed itself into a dragon, and flew up to heaven at once. In addition to Chotdaebawi Rock, other places with animal names such as Geobukbawi Rock, Sajabawi Rock, and Yonggul Cave attract a lot of interest from visitors. Of particular note is that the 660 m section in this area is open for barrier-free tours.

DMZ Punch Bowl Dulle Trail

A fun-looking trail you won't soon forget

Take some time to walk along a forest path that has remained untouched by humans for seven decades. You'll feel the pain of war on this forest road, where landmine signs can still be seen. You'll also have a more profound respect for the nature here, which has had time to be restored to its natural state. The unusual nickname "Punch Bowl" was given because of the coastal basin topography of the area, which resembles a punch bowl. Of the four courses to explore, the two most popular ones are Course 1, which passes by a large bunker, and Course 4, which passes by a minefield. For the safety of visitors and the protection of the surrounding forests, only guided tours are allowed after making a reservation. Delivery of lunch is also available.

Dojjaebigol Sky Valley

A thrilling experience in the sky

Dojjaebigol Sky Valley is a highly entertaining amusement facility consisting of a thrilling skywalk, sky-cycle, and giant slide. The word dojjaebi refers to a traditional Korean goblin, and this place was named after the fact that a friar's blue lanterns—which were thought to be related to goblins (dojjaebi)—flew in the valley around Mukho Lighthouse on dark, rainy nights. The sky-cycle, which runs through the sky along a 187 m round-trip cable wire, is especially popular.

Sangdomun Stone Fence Village

A 500-year-old village replete with traditional culture
